

WHAT'S REALLY BEHIND LONG ISLAND'S DEADLY OPIOID EPIDEMIC?

TRAUMA AND ADDICTION: What neuroscience and trauma research tells us about addictive disorders

CONTINUING EDUCATION COURSE FOR SOCIAL WORKERS

Dr. Vincent Felitti, co-author of CDC's Adverse Childhood Experiences Study, said that "Our current view of addiction is ill-founded". Given the high recidivism rates in addictions treatment, is it possible that the current models are not working? A trauma-informed perspective might be the key. We will explore the correlation between trauma and addictions and how this challenges the medical model of treatment. This foundational overview of addiction will incorporate new ideas that will give practitioners and educators alike a strong trauma-focused perspective in approaching their work with persons with addictive behaviors.
